

BTM are helping Bradford Council's Department of Health & Wellbeing to develop a new Neurodiversity Strategy, by facilitating a series of coproduction events to ensure that neurodivergent people who may draw on care and support can share their lived experience and shape services in Bradford District.

BTM would like to talk to as many autistic people as we can in the Bradford district. We want to hear about your experiences, and learn what you want Bradford council to do to make your life happier and healthier.

There are 8 opportunities to talk to us at BTM. We would like some people to talk to us on camera, if they want to, so that we can put your thoughts, opinions and feedback into a short film.

For more information get in touch with us at BTM to book a place at one of these sessions:
