

PBS Peer Review Pilot to improve PBS Training

Background

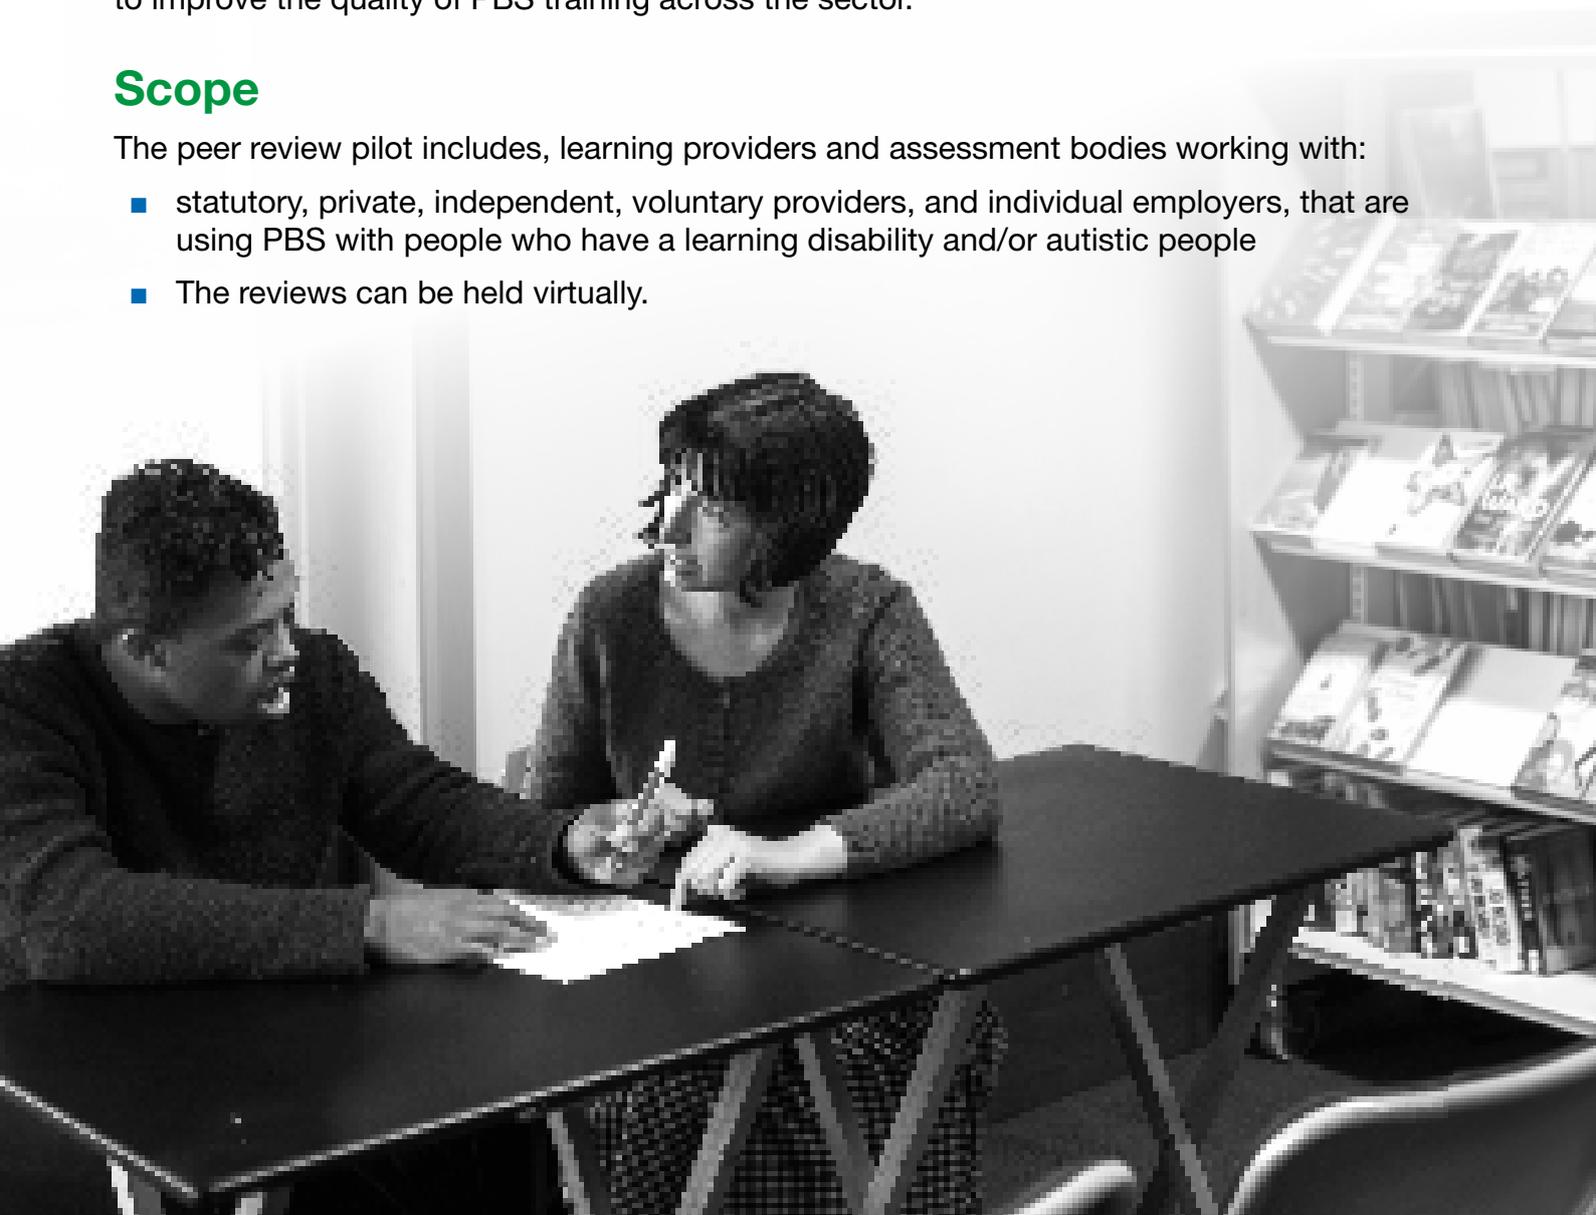

We're running a pilot project to develop and test a peer review process for positive behavioural support (PBS) training.

This involves a number of learning providers who peer review each other's training, to assure adequate quality, give feedback and share ideas. We hope that this will be a successful model to improve the quality of PBS training across the sector.

Scope

The peer review pilot includes, learning providers and assessment bodies working with:

- statutory, private, independent, voluntary providers, and individual employers, that are using PBS with people who have a learning disability and/or autistic people
- The reviews can be held virtually.

Feedback

The process is being co-produced with the people involved in the pilot. It is more important than ever that PBS is available.

I have found the PBS Peer Review Process thought provoking, challenging, inspiring and reassuring in terms of being involved in reviewing the quality of my own organisation PBS training and that of other providers – It's been an opportunity for me to share my learning and learn from others

Tracey Cox, CTS Homes

MacIntyre were reviewed by a peer organisation who provided really feedback but also took the time to speak to a manager in a MacIntyre PBS service to understand more about the follow up and impact the training has on practice. External validation has really helped us have confidence in our approach and has provided externally valid evidence of the positive impacts of our training.

Belinda Bradley, MacIntyre

Getting involved:

Skills for Care will be running two virtual events to find out more information about the PBS Peer Review pilot.

Event one:

Date - 17 November 2020

Time - 14.30 to 15.30

Book Now

Event two:

Date - 26 November 2020

Time - 14.30 to 15.30

Book Now

We are looking for more learning providers to be involved in the pilot. If you are interested in being involved in the pilot and want to find out more, please email Policy@skillsforcare.org.uk

